In 1998 the Rover Company's Land Rover, one of the most famous cars in the world, celebrated its 50th birthday. But not many people know that its success was a surprise to the company. The idea was born when the Wilks brothers, who lived on the Welsh island of Anglesey, wanted a cheap but strong car to travel around their farm. They copied the design of the American 'Willy's Jeep.' At that time the Rover car company had problems. In Britain after the war, people did not have enough money to buy Rover's luxury cars, so the company decided to use the Wilks brothers' idea to make a little money for a few years.

Cars are usually made of steel but this was very costly then, so Rover used aluminium, which was cheaper. There was a lot of aluminium because war planes were made of it. The design was very basic and uncomfortable, but strong - 'a tractor with a passenger seat!' When the first Land Rover was shown to the world at the Amsterdam Motor Show in 1948, it was an instant success. It was perfect for farmers and building companies because it could go to places where no other car could go. Because of the Land Rover, the Rover Company became stronger and started producing luxury cars again. They listened to their customers' ideas, and made changes to the design in 1958, 1972 and 1983. It became more comfortable and safer, but could still take you over fields, up mountains, into rivers and across deserts.

Laurel and Hardy were a popular comedy team composed of thin, English-born Stan Laurel and heavy, American-born Oliver Hardy. Laurel began his career as a comedian in English music halls before he immigrated to America in 1912. Copying Charlie Chaplin, he made his first film appearance in 1917. While working for Roach he met Hardy, nicknamed 'Babe' who had been a cinema owner. Roach decided to put them together in their first two-reel film, 'Putting Pants on Philip' (1927) directed by Leo McCarey, who went on to direct most of their early shorts. They made a great number of popular shorts before their first long feature with director James Parrott, 'Pardon Us' (1931). By 1936 the relationship between Laurel and Hardy was under pressure and both of them were distanced from Roach. They set up their own production company, making a further eight films up to 1945. They made one final film together in 1950, 'Atoll K' which was directed by Leo Joannon. The film was not a success, and brought an end to Laurel and Hardy's film careers.
